

KatChat,

I'm reaching out to apply for your position of Junior Full Stack Developer. I think that the work you are doing to connect people around the world is incredibly important, and the technologies you're using to do so are fascinating. I have a strong background in web development, complimented by extensive experience in team leadership and project management, that I think would be a great asset to your Community Connection team.

I began my exploration in tech at Epicodus, where I studied HTML, CSS, JavaScript, React, and C#/.Net. In addition to programming languages, I have a deep love of traditional languages as well. I am very adept in both Dutch and Spanish, and have additional experience in German and Japanese. Through collaborative and solo programming, I have designed, implemented and debugged countless projects that range from complex aggregate data solutions to elegant front end user experiences. The many teams I have been a part of have consistently achieved the highest level of quality and time management, through well documented project trajectory, utilizing strict adherence to test and behavior driven development. I feel confident that with the skill set I have built over the last 7 months as a developer, I will be able to grow into an essential tool for your business.

In life and in programming, I have always found success in fast paced environments by maintaining flexibility in my approach to both problem solving and communication. If at any time something isn't working, being willing and able to identify and change it have been some of my strongest toolsets. I've demonstrated this while helping to launch several bar programs that have consistently been ranked within the top five in Portland, OR, in publications such as the Oregonian and Thrillist. The ability to have efficient and nimble discourse while navigating a constantly changing environment has served me well in my previous career, and I know that this will be of value to your company as well.

Katchat, thank you for spending the time to review my application and cover letter. I would love to bring my background in web development, complimented by my robust experience with project management and implementation to your team.

I look forward to hearing from you,

-Frederick Ernest
